Message from the Editor-in-Chief

The primary goal of the Journal of Cardiovascular Development and Disease (JCDD, ISSN 2308-3425) is to provide cardiovascular scientists a platform to publish their work in a quick and efficient way. Topics can range from studies designed to decipher the events underlying early heart development to studies focusing on the origins of congenital and acquired heart disease. Papers submitted to JCDD undergo a fast, yet thorough, peer-review process. In this process, we will apply strict ethical policies and standards. JCDD guarantees fast dissemination of results to a large scientific audience.

Aims

The Journal of Cardiovascular Development and Disease is an international, peer-reviewed, open access journal, which publishes reviews, research papers and communications on cardiovascular development as well as congenital and acquired heart disease. Scientists are encouraged to publish their experimental, theoretical, and descriptive studies and observations in as much detail as possible. There is no restriction on the maximum length of the papers.

Scope

- Gene regulation
- Morphology
- Cardiovascular anatomy
- Cardiac physiology
- Vascular biology
 - Gene patterns
- Imaging techniques
- Cardiac regeneration
- Case studies
- Congenital heart disease
- Conduction system and arrhythmias
- Animal models for cardiovascular diseases
- Biophysics
- Genetics
