

Figure S1. $l=20\ \mu\text{m}$, RR test configuration; effect of measurement noise on the dispersion (represented through a box-plot) of the experimental response of one device. This plot implies that the measured scattered device responses are primarily governed by the dispersion of the parameters under investigation, and not by measurement errors, see also reference [34] cited in the paper.