Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue seeks to connect histories of Empire attentive to family with family histories attentive to Empire. It is interested in papers of all kinds relating to families and colonialism, and it is particularly interested in the interface between history, genealogy and empire. How can family stories expand our understandings of colonialism? In what ways and through what mechanisms did Empire impact upon families and the idea of 'The Family'? Does understanding the history of Empire provide us with fresh and exciting ways of understanding family as a concept, as well as families as lived experience?

As such, this Special Issue invites papers on any aspect of family and the British Empire in the eighteenth to twenty-first centuries.

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, ESCI (Web of Science), and many other databases.

Rapid Publication: manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 24.9 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 4.9 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the second half of 2023).
