Message from the Guest Editor

Dear colleagues,

What is migraine?

- Discuss that migraine is only a phenotype it is caused by multiple genetic and neurochemical abnormalities (which is why there are no agents universally effective in migraine treatment)

Why are migraines bad for you?

- Discuss pain and disability, but also comorbidities including cardiovascular and psychiatric ones
- Progression of migraine predicted by burden of migraine at the baseline
- Current acute medications; their uses and limitations
- Current preventive medications; their uses and limitations
- Agents that are being currently studied and their rationale
