Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Today, gynecologic oncology is still a topic worthy of attention, and its research is not rare. The key aim of this field is to diagnose and treat female genital tumors, especially breast cancer; ovarian cancer, cervical cancer, and vulvar squamous cell carcinoma; endometrial carcinoma; fallopian tube carcinoma; and uterine carcinosarcoma.

We are organizing a Special Issue on gynecologic oncology which aims to collect articles focusing on new diagnostic and treatment methods for various gynecological cancers. Researchers in the fields of gynecologic oncology, surgical oncology, and reproductive medicine are encouraged to submit their findings as original articles or reviews to this Special Issue. We welcome different opinions and voices to contribute to this field together.
