Message from the Guest Editors

We invite investigators to contribute original research articles (including human and animal studies; experimental and/or translational research will be given priority), as well as review articles that will stimulate the continuing efforts to get an early diagnosis, to gain new insights into pathobiological mechanisms, as well as to improve treatment of PH and quality of life.

Potential topics may include but are not limited to: Early diagnostic markers of different classes of PH; Genetics in PH; Cellular, molecular, and/or hemodynamic mechanisms that drive PH; Effect of thrombus formation/composition on the development of PH; Potential new treatments for PH; Improving quality of life of patients with PH.
