Message from the Guest Editors

Materials science and engineering are fields of great tradition in Romania. The existence of research and teaching schools in the major university centers in Romania is the pillar that leads to a continuous growth of research in this field. The increasingly modern and sophisticated equipment purchased by research laboratories in Romania has allowed Romanian researchers to publish, in recent years, papers of great scientific value, in the most prestigious journals. In this Special Issue, we aim to publish such valuable works, conceived and realized by Romanian researchers in research institutes and universities in Romania—works that bring important advances in materials science and engineering.
