Message from the Guest Editors

Organisations wanting to succeed in an ever-changing market need to rethink their existing business operations and models, placing greater emphasis on innovation towards sustainability. When we consider the risks of a business, we have to take into account problems in IT, quality, technology, people, finance, planning and implementation, maintenance, project implementation, etc. Managing all of these is a major challenge for managers, who must also take into account the risks associated with their decisions and knowledge. The aim of this Special Issue is to publish studies that, through their diversity, can provide a comprehensive picture of the risks that businesses face and the management models that can deal with the challenges posed by new risk factors. We plan to publish studies presenting management models suitable for dealing with new constantly emerging risks, or ones presenting novel solutions for dealing with existing, classic organisational risks.
