Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue in Sustainability seeks to disseminate the latest findings in, and implications of, all areas specifically related to customer satisfaction and brand equity. Sustainability marketing brings to the forefront novel conceptual and empirical approaches with substantial managerial implications for pervasive customer satisfaction and brand equity regardless of the economic sectors, industries, and businesses and countries in which they are deployed.

In this Special Issue, original research articles that focus on challenging and debatable issues in the field are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Sustainable marketing;
- Customer satisfaction;
- Brand equity;
- B2B, B2C, and C2C relationships;
- Branding of organic foods;
- Green purchase behaviour;
- Social network environments;
- e-commerce and non-e-commerce;
- Cross-cultural marketing strategy;
- Brand management of multinational enterprises;
- Digitalization and customer value co-creation.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
