

Preventing and Addressing Negative Behaviors in the Workplace

Guest Editors:

Dr. Gülüm Özer

Department of Psychological
Medicine, King's College London,
London WC2R 2LS, UK

Prof. Dr. Elfi Baillien

Department of Work and Organisation Studies, KU Leuven,
1000 Brussels, Belgium

Prof. Dr. Jordi Escartín

Social Psychology Department,
University of Barcelona,
Barcelona, Spain

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue addresses the prevention and addressing of negative behaviors in the workplace. In the current professional environment, workplace dynamics involve a multidimensional interplay of individual personalities, interpersonal relationships and organizational structures. Regrettably, within this context, intentional or not, a wide range of troubling and widespread negative behaviors often exist, adversely impacting the well-being of individuals and organizations. This Special Issue seeks to explore the evolving strategies for preventing, detecting and intervening in negative acts, drawing upon evidence-based approaches and theoretical models. Potential authors are kindly asked to send titles and abstracts to Gülüm Özer (gulum.ozer@kcl.ac.uk).

Deadline for manuscript
submissions:

31 August 2024

