Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue includes different areas of clinical nursing in healthcare related to frail patients and single aspects of frailty such as malnutrition, exhaustion, impairment of physical and cognitive performance, and comorbidities. Priority will be given to research results related to frailty screening, the crucial role of nursery care in frailty management and multidisciplinary management of frail patients from different settings, such as: cardiovascular, respiratory, COVID-19, cancers, and neurodegenerative diseases. In addition research articles focused on the frailty–gender relationship would be of great interest.
