Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Human trafficking infringes on the fundamental economic, social, cultural, civil, and political rights of those affected by it. Individuals who are forced into labour, exploited commercially for sex, made to commit crimes against their will, and compelled into a range of exploitative situations are also denied the right to freedom from torture, freedom of movement, the right to privacy, and the right to seek asylum and freedom from persecution.

The international community has long recognised human trafficking as a human rights issue, yet the complex and multi-faceted nature of exploitation and the multi-level regime of governance to address it means that there remains significant scope for fresh analyses on the intersections between human trafficking and human rights.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Societies (ISSN 2075-4698) is an interdisciplinary journal that brings together different scientific approaches to engage with societal questions to enhance our understanding of the social realm throughout history. The journal publishes original empirical research papers, literature reviews, and conceptual papers. Our aim is to publish papers that have a significant impact on addressing present and emerging societal questions. Therefore, we encourage researchers to publish their results in as much detail as possible. For empirical research papers and literature reviews, all experimental details must be provided, so that the results are reproducible. We also encourage the publication of timely theoretical pieces on topics of interest to existing and emerging societal questions. Papers are either published in the open journal or in Special Issues devoted to specific topics of interest to the field.
