

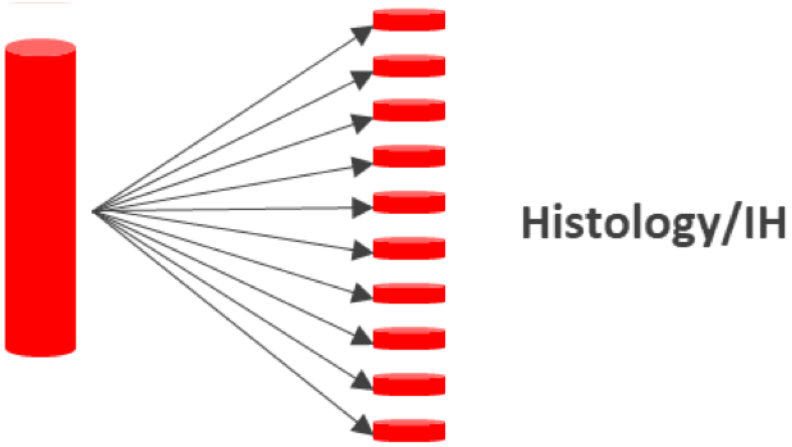

Figure S1. Experimental design. The entire femoral artery was divided into 10 consecutive segments that were divided into sections stained with different techniques and results averaged to yield the result of the sample.