

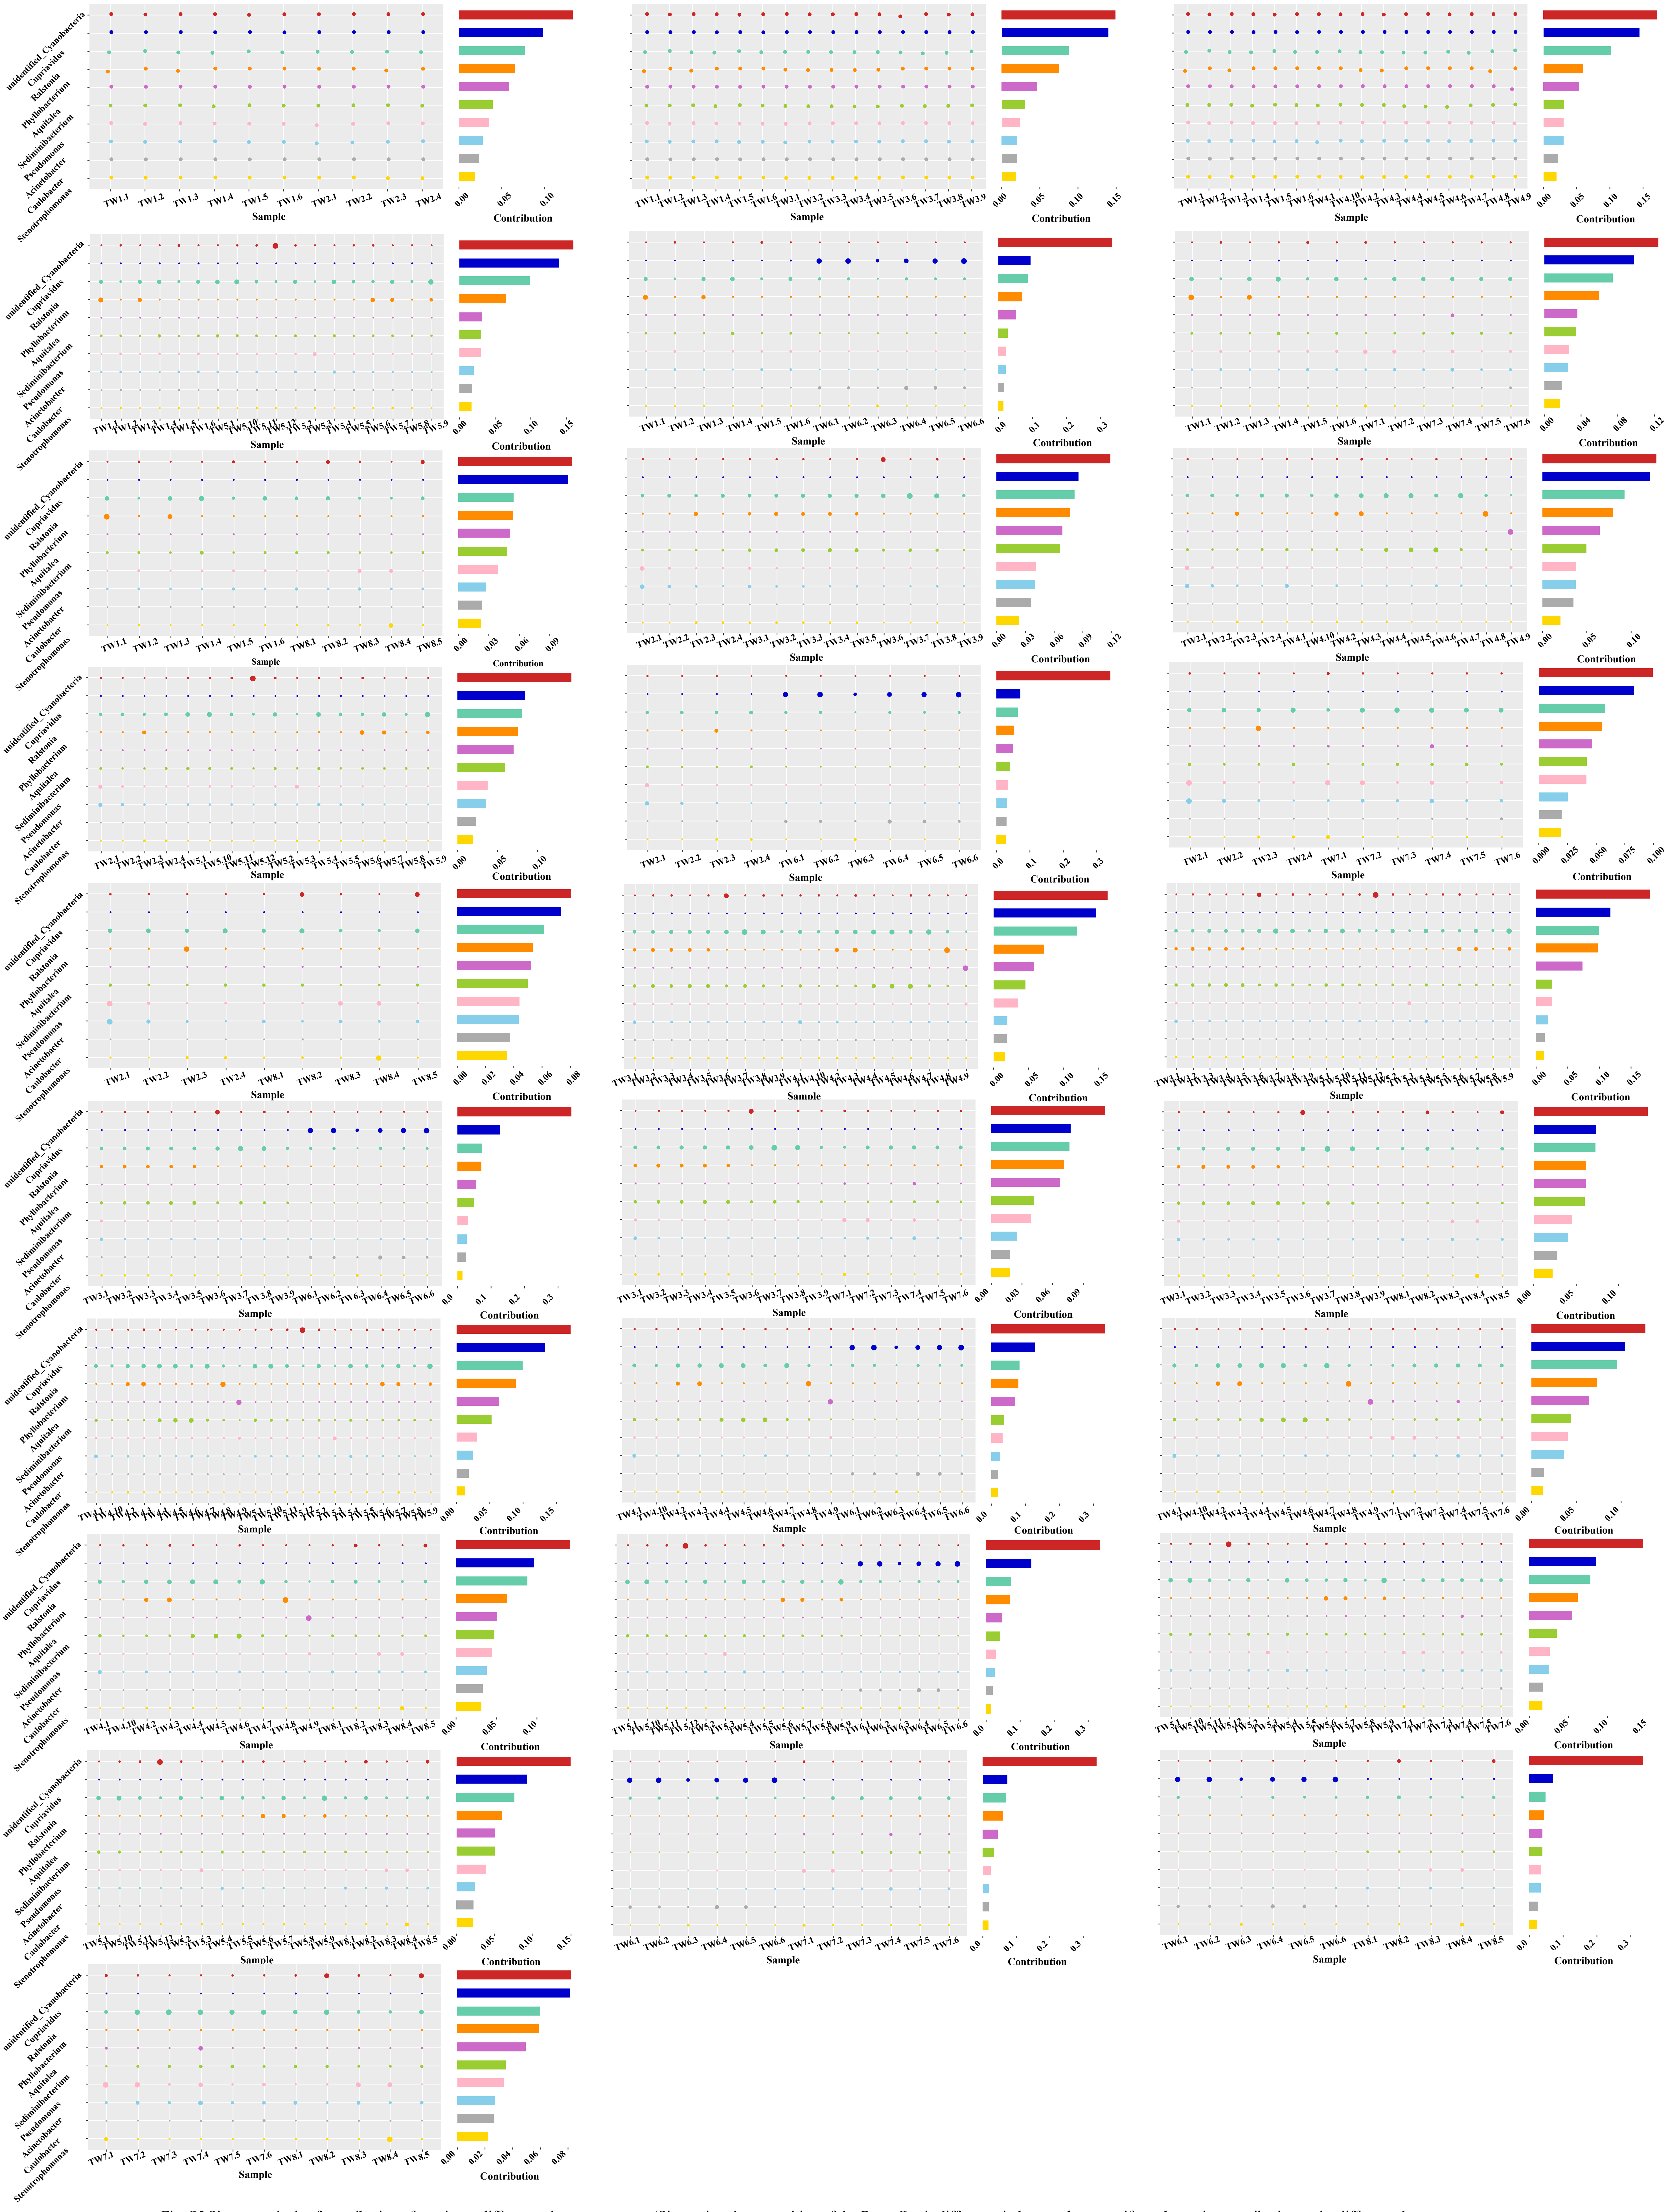

Fig. S5 Simper analysis of contribution of species to differences between groups. (Simper is a decomposition of the Bray–Curtis difference index, used to quantify each species contribution to the difference between two groups. The top ten species and their abundances that contribute to the difference between the two groups).