Figure S2. Transformation of LULC classes: Water Bodies (C1), Paddy Fields (C2), Open Forests (C3), Closed Forests (C4), Mangrove Forests (C5), Plantations (C6), Settlement Areas (C7), Aquaculture Areas (C8), and Others (C9) of Kyunsu township in Southern Myanmar across 40 years: (A) between 1978–1989 including Water Bodies, (B) between 1978–1989 excluding Water Bodies, (C) between 1989–2000 including Water Bodies, (D) between 1989–2000 excluding Water Bodies, (E) between 2000–2011 including Water Bodies, (F) between 2000–2011 excluding Water Bodies, (G) between 2011–2020 including Water Bodies, (H) between 2011–2020 excluding Water Bodies, (I) between 1978–2020 including Water Bodies, (J) between 1978–2020 excluding Water Bodies. Ticks indicate the area of LULC in 100,000 ha.

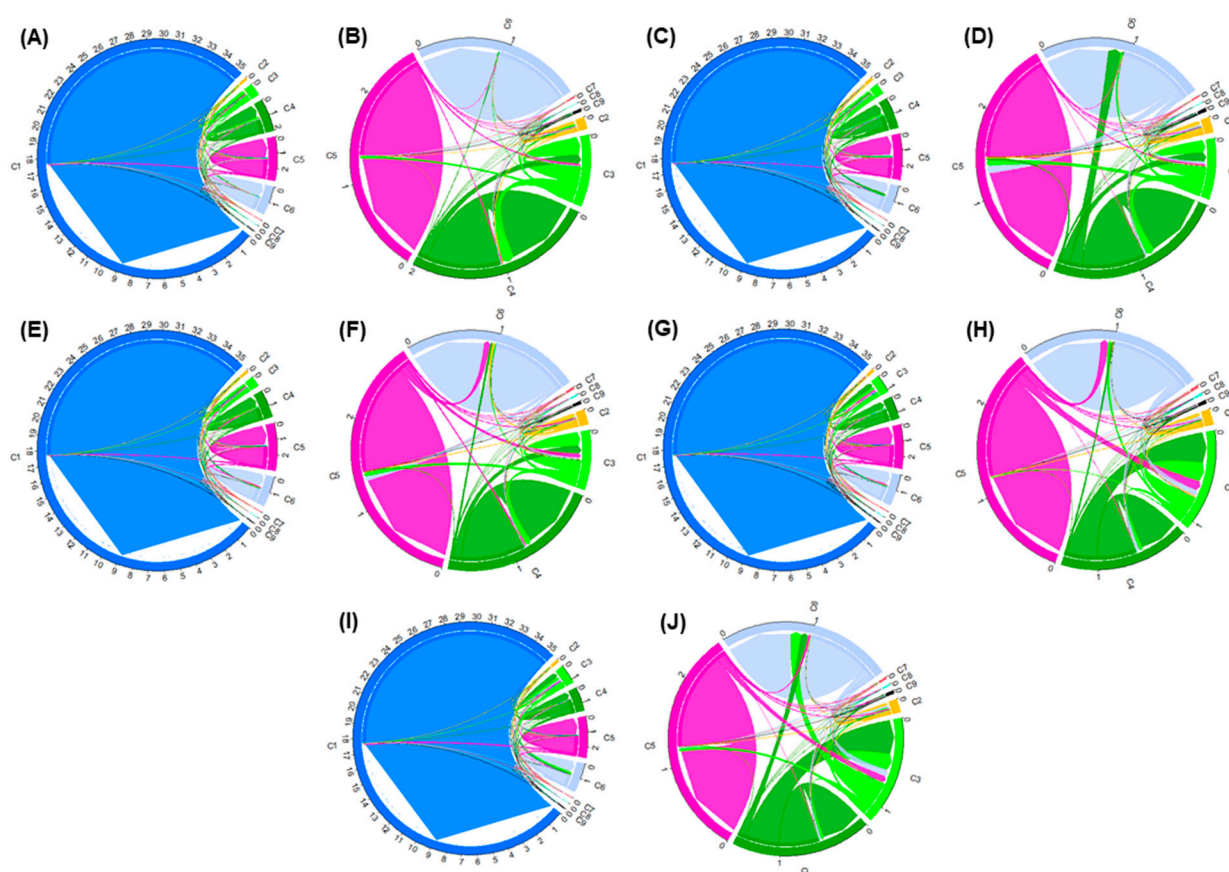

Table S1: Reference training samples used for supervised random forest (RF) classifier to classify Closed Forests and Non-Closed Forests of Kyunsu township in Southern Myanmar across 40 years.

Year	Land Cover Classe	No. of Reference Training Samples
		Point	Polygon
1978	Closed Forests	115	42
	Non-Closed Forests	-	33
1989	Closed Forests	-	64
	Non-Closed Forests	-	87
