

Figure S1. A schematic representation of the Percoll column used to fractionate the luminal fluid from different gut compartments into a fiber-free fraction (enriched in microbial cells) and the fiber fraction (enriched in wood particles and their associated microbial cells).