

Supplementary Figure S1. Schematic view of the network structure for the classification of tissue subtypes. First, whole slide images were tessellated into 360×360 pixel image patches. Then, the image patches were provided as inputs to the Inception v3 network for classification. The last layer of the Inception v3 network is a softmax layer for 2-class classification in the present study.

