

Supplementary to:

Beta-Diversity Enhancement by Archaeological Structures: Bacterial Communities of an Historical Tannery Area of the City of Jena (Germany) Reflect the Ancient Human Impact

Johann Michael Köhler <sup>1,*</sup>, Linda Ehrhardt <sup>1</sup>, Jialan Cao <sup>1</sup>, Frances Möller <sup>1</sup>, Tim Schüler <sup>2</sup> and Peter Mike Günther <sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Department of Physical Chemistry and Microreaction Technology, Institute for Micro- und Nanotechnologies/Institute for Chemistry and Biotechnology, Technische Universität Ilmenau, 98684 Ilmenau, Germany; jialan.cao@tu-ilmenau.de (J.C.); mike.guenther@tu-ilmenau.de (P.M.G.)

<sup>2</sup> Thuringian State Office for Archaeology and Monument Conservation, 99423 Weimar, Germany

* Correspondence: michael.koehler@tu-ilmenau.de

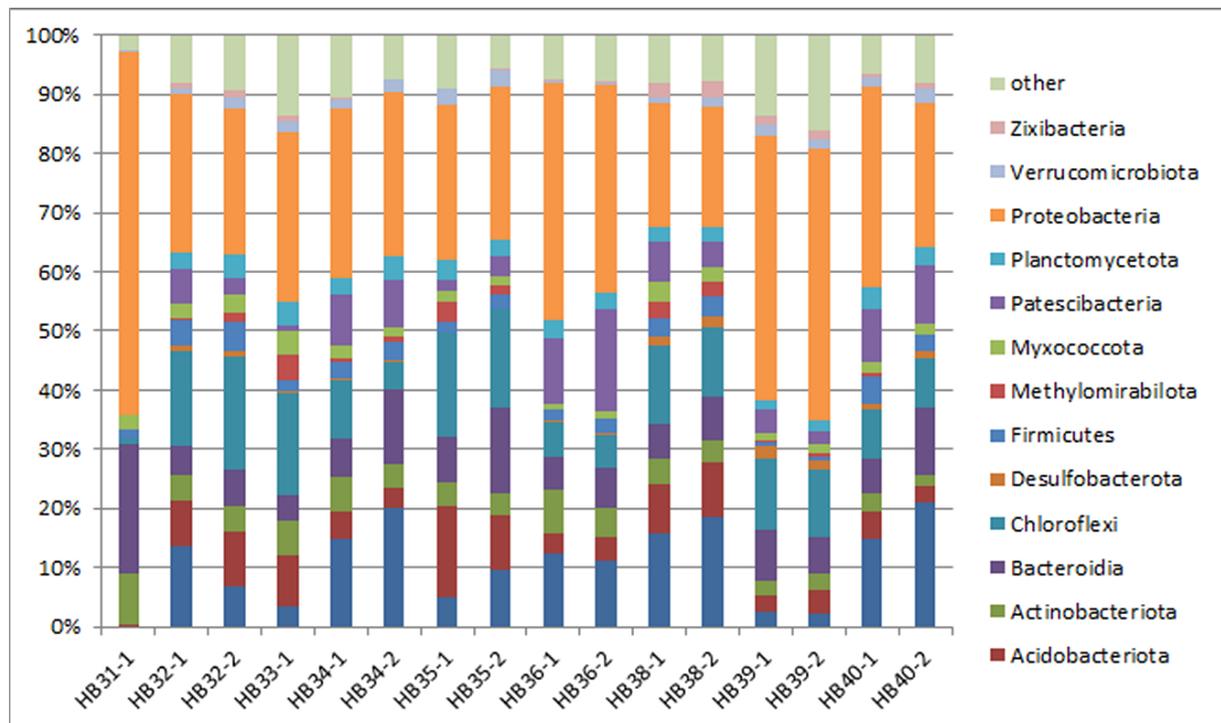

Figure S1. Taxonomical composition of all samples by phyla.

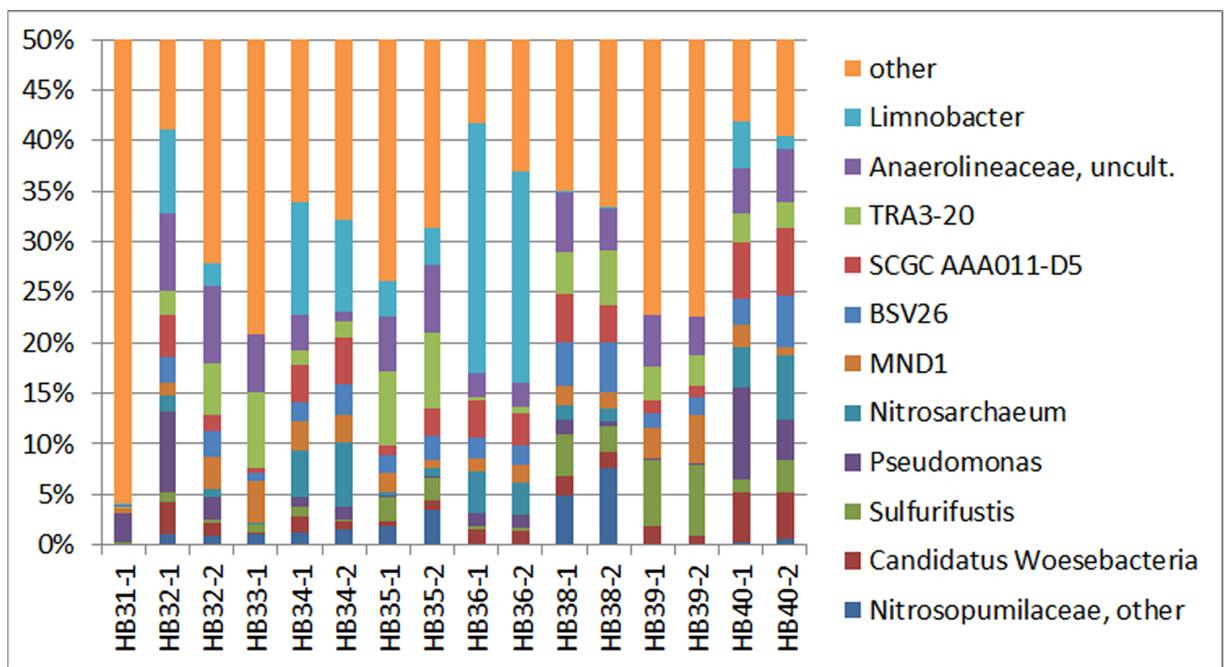

Figure S2. Taxonomical composition of all samples by OTUs.

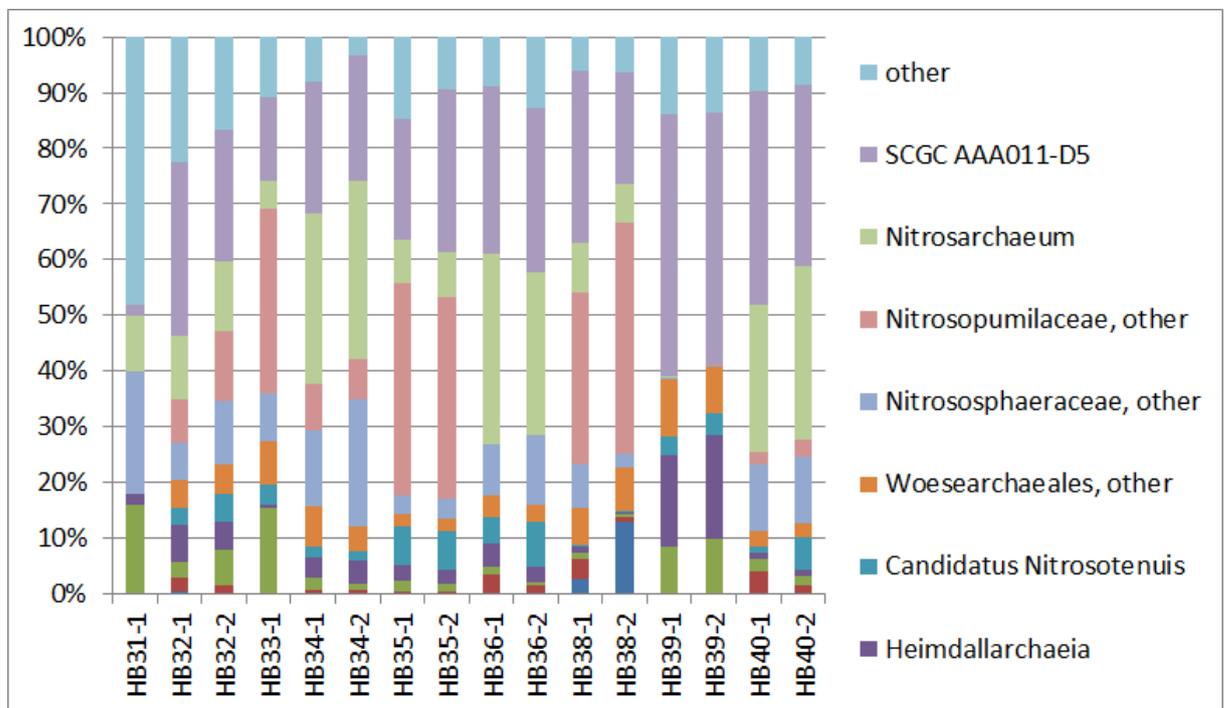

Figure S3. Taxonomical composition of Archaea in all samples.