

Modelled-Microgravity Reduces Virulence Factor Production in Staphylococcus aureus through Downregulation of agr-Dependent Quorum Sensing

Macauley J. Green ¹, Ewan J. Murray ², Paul Williams ², Amir M. Ghaemmaghami ³, Jonathan W. Aylott ¹ and Philip M. Williams ^{1,*}

¹ School of Pharmacy, University of Nottingham, University Park, Nottingham NG7 2RD, UK;
macauley.green@nottingham.ac.uk (M.J.G.)

² Biodiscovery Institute and School of Life Sciences, University of Nottingham, University Park, Nottingham NG7 2RD, UK;
paul.williams@nottingham.ac.uk (P.W.)

³ School of Life Sciences, University of Nottingham, University Park, Nottingham NG7 2RD, UK
* Corresponding authors: phil.williams@nottingham.ac.uk (P.M.W.)

Supplementary Material

Fig. S1 Transmission electron microscopy of USA300 (A) and SH1000 (B)

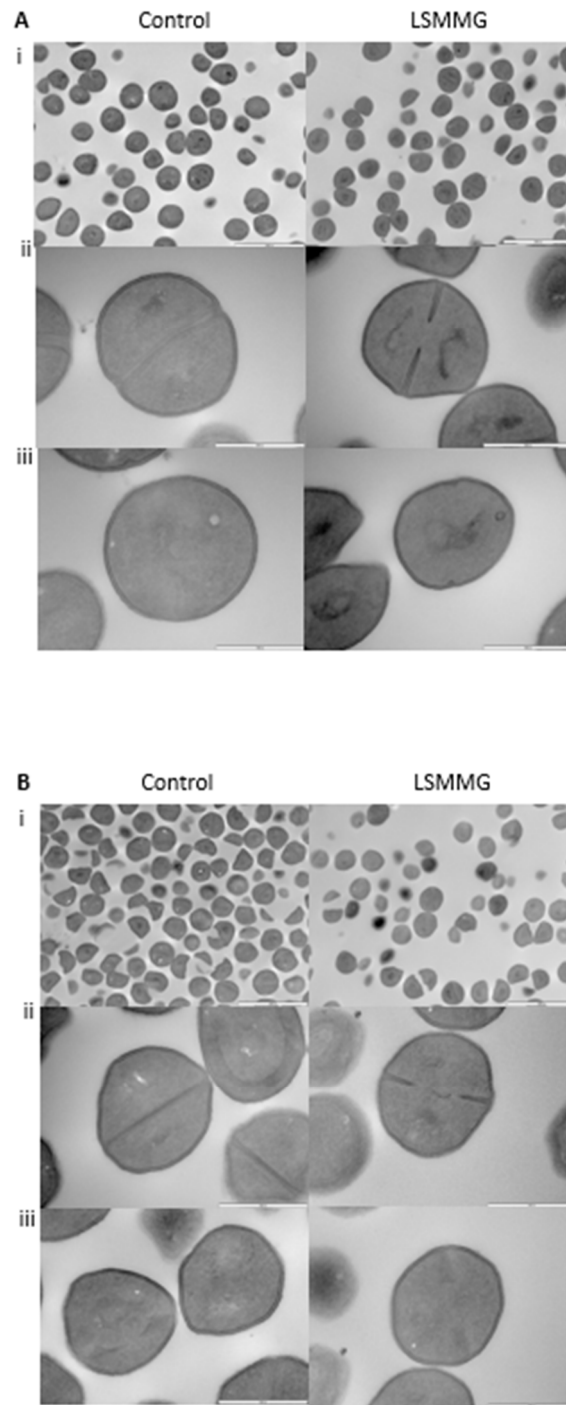

Figure S1: Transmission electron microscopy of USA300 (A) and SH1000 (B) in the late exponential phase of growth in X-Vivo 15 medium. (i) ×11500, (ii) 60000× of dividing cells and (iii) 60000× magnification of non-dividing cells.