

Efficient Aqueous Copper Removal by Burnt Tire-Derived Carbon-Based Nanostructures and Their Utilization as Catalysts

Iviwe Cwaita Arunachellan ^{1,2}, Madhumita Bhaumik ³, Hendrik Gideon Brink ^{3,}, Kriveshini Pillay ¹ and Arjun Maity ^{2,3,}

¹ Department of Chemical Science, University of Johannesburg, Doornfontein, Johannesburg 2028, South Africa; ivienokalipa@gmail.com (I.C.A.); kriveshinip@uj.ac.za (K.P.)

² DST/CSIR, Centre for Nanostructure and Advanced Materials (CeNAM), Council for Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR), 1-Meiring Naude Road, Pretoria 0081, South Africa

³ Department of Chemical Engineering, Faculty of Engineering, Built Environment and Information Technology, University of Pretoria, Private Bag X20, Pretoria 0028, South Africa; bhaumikmadhu@gmail.com

* Correspondence: deon.brink@up.ac.za (H.G.B.); amaity@csir.co.za (A.M.);
Tel.: +27-12-841-2658; Fax: +27-12-841-3553 (A.M.)

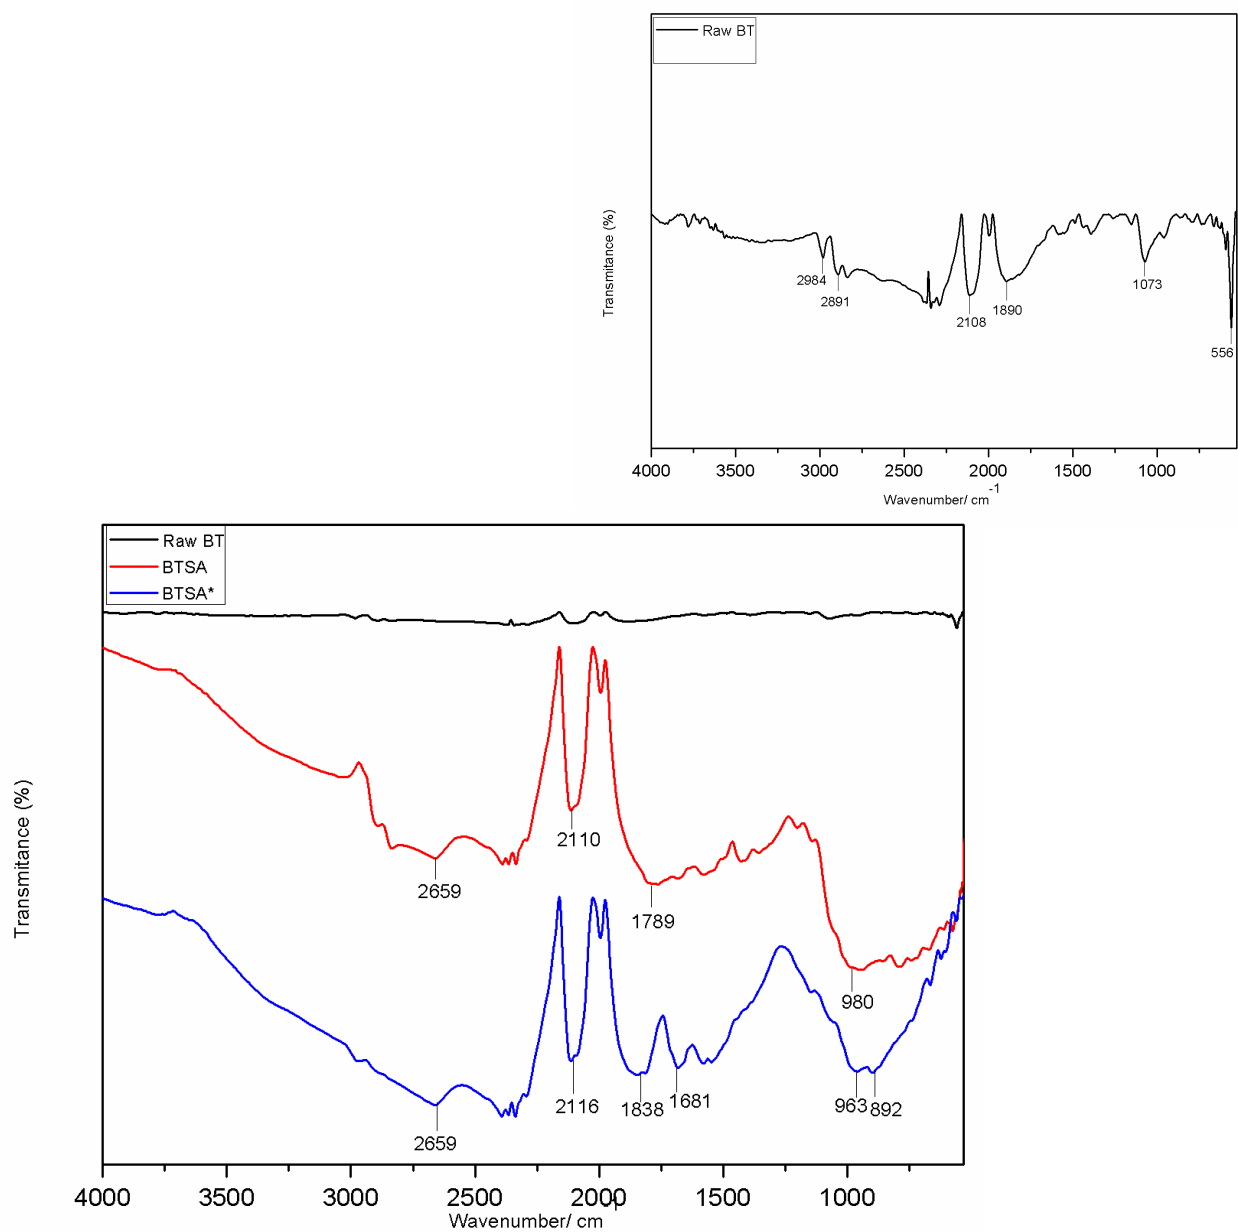

Figure S1. FTIR before adsorption for Raw BT, BTSA and, BTHM.

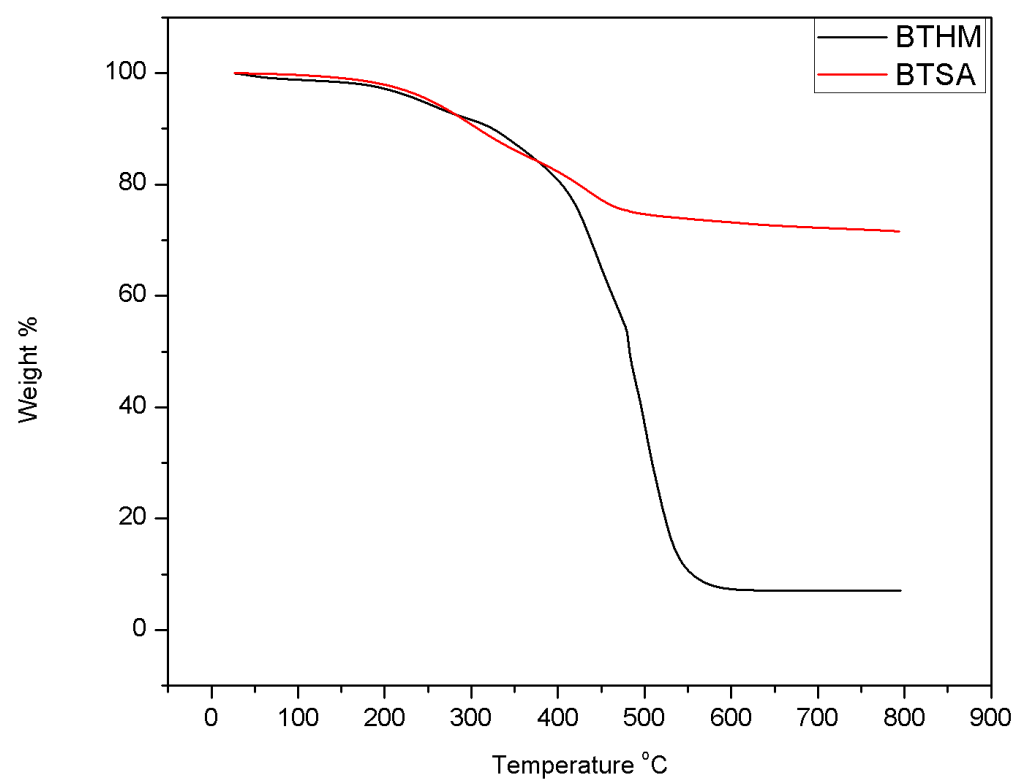

Figure S2. Thermogravimetric analysis of BTSA and BTHM.