| Inclusion criteria | Exclusion criteria |
|---|---|
| Exposure:· It reports one or more types of food sources - purchased, own production (growing, gathering, hunting, fishing), borrowed, exchanged, bartered, food transfers and gifts, food aid, local-vs-imported· Studies about small-scale farmers focusing on farmer's own food security, income and other livelihoods. Small-scale farming as a food source for own consumption. | Exposure:· Studies reporting food-related issues (such as food transport and distribution, dietary and consumption patterns, food items) but not specifically linked to a food source.· Studies describing food sector management (e.g., agriculture sector) and/or worker organisations (e.g., peasants' organisation)· Studies about small-scale farmers focusing on how to increase food production, value chains, access to markets, etc.· Food sources for non-human feeding or food practices (e.g., hunting) by non-humans· Food sources (such as large commercial farms) not described as part of the food environment (i.e., there is no link or interaction with population) |
| Population:UN categorisation of Small Island Developing States + Tokelau | |
| Outcome:Information on food source characteristics and/or conceptualisation of evidence on food sources | |
| Time Frame:From 1992 (included) up to date (Trade liberalization agreements, FAO) | Time Frame:Studies published on or after 1992 but focusing on past times such as research using isotope analysis of skeletal elements to reconstruct indigenous diets. |
| Languages:All languages | |
| Study type:All included. No need to contain primary data. Reviews are also included | Study type:Studies reporting hypothetical scenarios. |
| Document type:Peer-reviewed journal articles and grey literature. | Document type:Exclude books, book chapters and thesis (not relevant for mapping exercise).Exclude conference proceedings and conference abstracts (not enough information to be extracted) |