

Supplementary Information

Optical Analysis Based on UV Absorption Spectrum for Monitoring Total Organic Carbon and Nitrate Nitrogen in River Water

MinHan Kim ^{1,†}, SeongWook Park ^{2,†}, ByoungSun Park ², HongSeok Kim ²,
Taeyong Woo ¹, SangYoun Kim ¹, JungHee Jang ³ and ChangKyo Yoo ^{1,*}

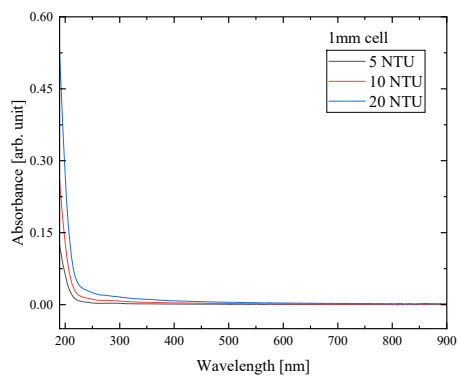

¹Dept. of Environmental Science and Engineering, College of Engineering, Kyung Hee University, 1732 Deogyeong-daero, Giheung-gu, Yongin-si, Gyeonggi-do, 17104, Republic of Korea

²Technical Research Center, HSKorea Co., Ltd., Doosan VentureDigm #826, Heungan-daero 415, Dongan-gu, Anyang-si, Gyeonggi-do, 14059, Republic of Korea; swpark@hs-korea.com

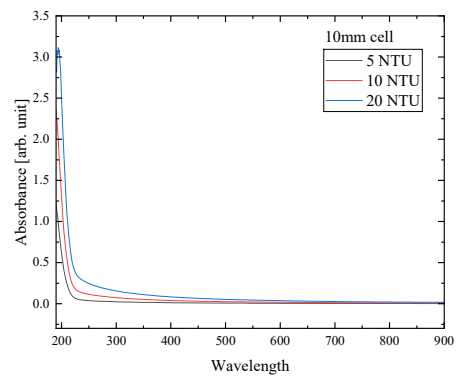

³Plant Engineering Center, Institute for Advanced Engineering, 633-2 Goan-ri, Baegam-myon, Cheoin-gu, Yongin-si, Gyeonggi-do 175-28, Republic of Korea; azazjh@gmail.com

Submitted to Journal of Water

*Corresponding author: Integrated Engineering Major, Dept. of Environmental Science and Engineering, College of Engineering, Kyung Hee University, Gyeonggi-Do, 17104, Korea, Tel: +82-31-201-3824; Fax: +82-31-202-8854; E-mail: ckyoo@khu.ac.kr

(a)

(b)

Figure S.1 Absorbance Analysis of Turbidity Standard Solutions at Optical Pathlengths of 1 mm and 10 mm