In this Special Issue, I outline some new advances in genetics, clinical evaluation, localization, therapy (newly including immunotherapy) of pheochromocytoma and paraganglioma including their metastatic counterparts. Well-known and experienced clinicians and scientists contributed to this book to include some novel approaches to these tumors. It is mainly addressed to health care professionals from different subspecialties, such as oncologists, endocrinologists, endocrine surgeons, pediatricians, and radiologists. All in all, the research shows that the field of pheochromocytoma/paraganglioma is constantly evolving and significant progress has been made in the last five years that requires health care professionals and scientists to learn new information and implement it in their clinical practice or scientific work, respectively. This book should not be missed by anybody who is focusing on neuroendocrine tumors, their newest evaluation and treatment.
