Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Hospitality and tourism are at the forefront of globalization development because of their mature, global, and highly competitive characteristics. Also, the pandemic brings the people-oriented concept back to the challenge list for the organization. While many acknowledge and understand this, little is understood or discussed the changes required to make people a central aspect of work and the workplace. For the hospitality and tourism sector, the emphasis is shifting to a co-creation process that involves engagement from both consumers and employees.

Topics include, but are not limited to:

- 1) hospitality and tourism under globalization
- 2) smart and connected hospitality and tourism
- 3) social and cultural dimensions of hospitality and tourism
- 4) entrepreneurship case studies from a wide range of hospitality and tourism sectors
- 5) people-oriented and perspective in hospitality and tourism
- 6) crisis response and recovery for the hospitality and tourism industry
- 7) workforce in hospitality and tourism industry
- 8) hospitality and tourism leadership
- 9) sustainability issues in hospitality
