The Future of Working Spaces: Learning, Collaboration and Worker (in-) Visibilization

Message from the Guest Editors

The present Call for Papers encourages submissions (conceptual, empirical, reviews) that help to build a more robust understanding of the relationships among (in)visibility, digital work, and working spaces. The following questions are of great interest, among others:

- What are the actual 'future working spaces'?
- How do we consider working spaces in an extended vision of spaces, how are key characteristics of spaces reshaped and enacted in other configurations that may be material (home office, a laptop) or less material, and what are the implications of such dematerialized (pieces of) working spaces?
- How do working spaces foster collaborative work?
- How do organizations and management ensure organizational learning?
- How do workers develop mechanisms to remain visible through collaboration and learning in these working spaces? How do they experiment with invisibilization and visibilization, and what is the nature of these (in)visibilization processes?

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

You are invited to contribute a research article or a comprehensive review for publication after successful peerreview processing in Administrative Sciences. Administrative Sciences is a multidisciplinary journal for the broad field of organization studies. It publishes research articles, reviews and other content, in open access format, released on the internet immediately after acceptance. As an open access journal, we believe that academic knowledge should be available to all, for free, so that others can build upon the knowledge shared. Open availability will encourage a stronger evidence-based management practice. The scientific community and the public have unlimited, free access to the content as soon as it is published. We would be pleased to welcome you as one of our authors. We also invite you to offer any proposals for Special Issue topics that you feel would be of interest.
