Emotional Health in the Workplace: Implications for Organizational Dynamics, Performance, and Employee Well-Being

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to bring together innovative and multidisciplinary research that explores the concept of emotional health in the workplace and its implications for organizational dynamics, performance, and employee well-being. Given the increasing role of emotions in today's work environment, this Special Issue welcomes theoretical and empirical studies that examine how emotional health influences various organizational dynamics and work behaviors, productivity, job satisfaction, leadership, conflict resolution, emotional burnout, and team dynamics. This Special Issue takes an interdisciplinary perspective and invites contributions from psychology, management, gender studies, sociology, artificial intelligence, and other fields that explore the impact of emotional health on organizations. Submissions may include quantitative, qualitative, or systematic review studies that offer new insights or practical applications for improving emotional health in the workplace. Abstract Submission Deadline: 31 October 2025 Notification of Abstract Acceptance: 30 November 2025

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Welcome to Administrative Sciences, the journal aims to advance and communicate knowledge concerning management theory and practice both in public administration and in profit organizations; it encourages submissions that build on interdisciplinary research in related fields, such as business, economics, political science, gender studies, psychology, sociology, physiology, communication theory or artificial intelligence and their implications on management, organizations and the society. Join us on a journey through the Administrative Sciences, where management merges with innovation.
