Corporate Social Responsibility, Stakeholder Engagement, and Universities

Message from the Guest Editors

Corporate social responsibility (CSR) is an increasingly relevant topic in the current university context because they play a key role in modern society and contribute (socially and economically) to the local community's development. A considerable number of recent studies suggest that CSR should be one of the core functions of universities, and the adoption of CSR is suggested as a suitable approach for universities to become responsible corporate citizens for stakeholders, communities, and societies. Therefore, CSR is not a philanthropic activity but rather an orientation that is integrated into the mandate and programming of the university; consequently, universities are encouraged to adopt CSR in all disciplines of teaching methodologies, curricula, research, and university strategies...

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Welcome to Administrative Sciences, the journal aims to advance and communicate knowledge concerning management theory and practice both in public administration and in profit organizations; it encourages submissions that build on interdisciplinary research in related fields, such as business, economics, political science, gender studies, psychology, sociology, physiology, communication theory or artificial intelligence and their implications on management, organizations and the society. Join us on a journey through the Administrative Sciences, where management merges with innovation.
