Corporate Social Responsibility and Green Innovation: A COVID-19 Perspective

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue is designed to spotlight contemporary research on corporate social responsibility (CSR) and green innovation from a COVID-19 perspective. What has been going on in the CSR field for the last two years that warrants investigation?

Moreover, the global economy has been disastrously impacted by COVID-19, but the ways that business organizations, governments, and policy makers are using CSR strategies to mitigate stakeholders' demands are emerging concepts that we are only just beginning to understand and investigate. CSR uses a strategic matter rather than a philanthropic approach via global corporation to gain sustainability. Furthermore, the devastation being caused by climate change mandates a greater emphasis on green innovation.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Welcome to Administrative Sciences, the journal aims to advance and communicate knowledge concerning management theory and practice both in public administration and in profit organizations; it encourages submissions that build on interdisciplinary research in related fields, such as business, economics, political science, gender studies, psychology, sociology, physiology, communication theory or artificial intelligence and their implications on management, organizations and the society. Join us on a journey through the Administrative Sciences, where management merges with innovation.
