Fostering of Entrepreneurial Ecosystems in the Era of the Fourth Industrial Revolution

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on the effective development of entrepreneurial ecosystems in light of the 4th industrial revolution by focusing on institutional, financial, and technological innovation. The entrepreneurial ecosystem perspective recognises that companies make a significant contribution to economic growth and need to be actively fostered in order to generate further entrepreneurship opportunities. The key aim of entrepreneurial ecosystems is to diagnose and promote entrepreneurial activity around the world. Entrepreneurial ecosystems are composed of various factors and interdependent actors, organisations and institutions (e.g., companies, venture capitalists, business angels and banks, universities, public sector agencies and financial bodies). Many entrepreneurial actors and institutions connect, mediate and manage the performance of the entrepreneurial environment to support not only enterprises but also other organisations in terms of entrepreneurial ecosystem conditions. Given the entrepreneurial conditions, a wide array of factors can be analysed...

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Welcome to Administrative Sciences, the journal aims to advance and communicate knowledge concerning management theory and practice both in public administration and in profit organizations; it encourages submissions that build on interdisciplinary research in related fields, such as business, economics, political science, gender studies, psychology, sociology, physiology, communication theory or artificial intelligence and their implications on management, organizations and the society. Join us on a journey through the Administrative Sciences, where management merges with innovation.
