Marketing Strategy: Challenges and Initiatives in the Emerging Green Marketing Environment

Message from the Guest Editors

The contribution of marketing for sustainability in translating the organizational objectives and plans into a viable sustainability marketing strategy reflects market place realities (strategy maps the 'how' of organizational planning). However, a dynamic market environment requires dynamic marketing strategies. What does a turbulent and disruptive sustainable market transformation mean in terms of strategy development and actions? Currently, there appear to be uncertainties and a lack of evidence-based clarity regarding the actions that can identify the experience on how to approach this new market environment.
