

Special Issue

Feature Papers in the Fields of Agricultural Economics, Policies and/or Rural Management

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to publish high-quality papers that advance our understanding of issues and challenges in areas of agricultural economics, development policies and/or rural management, broadly defined. This Special Issue aims to publish a set of feature papers in the fields of agricultural economics, policies and/or rural management. Since the audience of this section is global, the Section Editor-in-Chief welcomes articles from a diverse range of theoretical perspectives and methodological approaches, which engage with and contribute to sustainable agriculture and/or rural development. The focus of this Special Issue is on economic analysis and policies relevant for agricultural and/or rural sectors. Articles addressing contemporary issues dealing with agriculture and food economics, development policies, ICT, agribusiness, climate change, sustainable agriculture, productivity and efficiency, poverty and sustainable livelihoods, rural–urban migration and rural management are especially welcomed. The Special Issue also welcomes critical reviews and syntheses of the current state of affairs and emerging themes in agricultural economics, policies and rural management.
