

Special Issue

It Runs in the Family: The Importance of the Lamiaceae Family Species—2nd Edition

Message from the Guest Editor

The aim of this Special Issue is to collect state-of-the-art research on species from the Lamiaceae family to provide new insights into the importance and unique properties of these plants. All recent advances in the introduction of native (or new) species to cultivation schemes, new cultivation techniques (such as hydroponics or substrates), new applications and uses (edible flowers, urban uses, postharvest management, etc.), and innovative and improved methods of determining biological properties will also be covered in this Special Issue.
