

Special Issue

Water Saving in Irrigated Agriculture: Series II

Message from the Guest Editor

Following the success of the first Special Issue of Agronomy on “Water Saving in Irrigated Agriculture”, we are pleased to announce the launch of the second edition of this Special Issue, in which the same subject, editorial team, and submission process will be maintained. This Special Issue will focus on the recent developments in agronomy and agricultural water management, namely the problem of water saving and conservation in irrigated agriculture, as well as the safe use of recycled water. These developments will contribute to clarifying some current questions and point out feasible solutions for specific real problems, particularly in water scarcity contexts.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Agronomy draws together researchers from diverse areas of agricultural research with a common aim of enhancing agricultural productivity globally. The journal provides unlimited free access to all those interested in advancing agricultural science from both the research and general community. Papers are released immediately after acceptance through the internet.

Agronomy is supported by our authors and their institutes through low article processing charges (APC) for accepted papers. We hope you will support the journal by becoming one of our authors.
