Innovative Approaches in Veterinary Infectious Disease Epidemiology

Message from the Guest Editors

Infectious diseases of animals, especially those with zoonotic potential, are of concern to their owners and breeders as well as to veterinarians, physicians, and epidemiologists. We invite you to submit articles discussing the latest data on new methods of controlling infectious animal diseases, limiting the spread of pathogens by vectors, and describing possible ways of eradicating them from the environment. We also encourage papers dealing with all aspects of the epidemiology of animal diseases, from the analysis of pathogens with zoonotic potential to the description of transmission routes and attempts to estimate the risk of an outbreak. Original research and review articles are welcome in this Special Issue. Areas of research may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Natural methods for the prevention of infectious diseases:
- Preventive management strategies for infectious diseases;
- Methods to reduce vector transmission;
- Non-conventional therapies;
- Preventive and interventional immunization.
