

Special Issue

Food Security, Nutrition, and Public Health

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of Applied Sciences delves into the multifaceted interplay between food security, nutrition, and public health. We seek comprehensive research that assures safe, nutritious, and sufficient food through sustainable food production and consumption practices. Studies should focus on the impacts of dietary patterns on health, evaluating public health interventions aimed at promoting nutritious diets. Additionally, we are interested in how sustainable approaches within food systems can enhance nutritional outcomes and public health while conserving environmental resources for future generations. Submissions should contribute to the understanding of integrating sustainability into food security strategies to support global health and environmental goals. This Special Issue aims to highlight innovative solutions and policy recommendations for achieving long-term food security and improved public health outcomes.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
