Soil Analysis in Different Ecosystems

Message from the Guest Editors

Soil plays a key role in ecosystems, contributing to their functionality and the services that they provide. As such, soil supports climate change mitigation, biodiversity, nutrient and water cycling, and vegetation, and is pivotal to human society. Therefore, it is essential to understand the dynamics of soil in different ecosystems, including its role, services, and threats. This Special Issue welcomes all research related to soil, from pedology, soil physics, soil chemistry, soil biology, soil security, and pedometrics. Suggested topics include carbon sequestration and lability, chemical mobilization, mineral weathering, geomorphology, geospatial analysis, soil depth functions, biotic activity, temporal and spatial soil changes, or any other topic that contributes to our understanding of soil in various ecosystems.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
