

Special Issue

Digitalization in Dental and Oral Implantology

Message from the Guest Editors

Digital dentistry is evolving rapidly and new techniques and applications are introduced every day. Digital implantology is also advancing in leaps and bounds. The latter comprises the use of CBCT and intra-oral scanners, static or dynamic guided implant surgery, 3D-printing surgical guides, 3D-printed provisional implant-supported crowns, etc. The implementation of these digital tools in implantology has led to faster, more predictable, and more straightforward treatment protocols. On the other hand, due to this rapid evolution, many of these newly introduced techniques, protocols, and printed materials are not yet discussed in science. Therefore, we are proud to introduce a Special Issue of Applied Sciences: 'Digitalization in Dental and Oral Implantology'.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
