Virtual Reality in Physical Therapy

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to invite you to contribute to this Special Issue, entitled "Virtual Reality in Physical Therapy", which will focus on innovative applications of virtual reality (VR) technologies in rehabilitation settings. In recent years, VR has emerged as a promising tool in physical therapy through enhancing patient engagement, motivation, and adherence to therapeutic exercises. With the widespread availability of affordable and high-performance VR systems, clinicians and researchers are now exploring immersive and interactive rehabilitation methods that could complement or even surpass traditional therapy in certain contexts. This Special Issue aims to present cutting-edge research and practical applications of VR in physical therapy across different populations and conditions. The journal Life offers an interdisciplinary platform, and this topic aligns with its focus on advances in life sciences, healthcare technologies, and therapeutic interventions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
