State-of-the-Art Earth Sciences and Geography in China

Message from the Guest Editors

With the rapid development of China's geography, surveying, and mapping in recent years, Chinese researchers have made significant progress in earth sciences research and technological development fields, etc. We would like to invite authors to submit original research articles or review articles on the latest research advances in both basic theoretical research and the interdisciplinary as well as technical application of geography. We hope that all published papers will be widely read and highly influential in the field. The topics of interest for this Special Issue include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Remote sensing;
- Geoinformatics;
- Geohazards;
- Geochemistry;
- Geophysics;
- Geology;
- Geosciences;
- Mineral resources;
- Geotechnical engineering;
- Marine geoscience;
- Hydrological and hydrogeological sciences;
- Environmental contamination;
- Climate studies;
- Big data;
- Artificial intelligence.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
