

Special Issue

Research on Organic and Medicinal Chemistry, Second Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of Applied Sciences aims to collect relevant scientific contributions in these branches of chemistry, covering a wide range of areas, from human health sciences to energy. The ongoing challenges of our time to improve synthetic techniques and methodologies in order to obtain more environmentally friendly procedures, as well as the emergence of diseases resistant to current drug therapies and poorly investigated diseases, require numerous efforts by the scientific community. Thus, research on novel reactions, bioreactors, or biocatalysts and their optimization; the identification of new targets; the development of novel or optimized molecules (via computer-aided drug design techniques); and innovative delivery systems are important for developing more potent and safe tools.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
