

Special Issue

Reimaging Forensic Sciences – Outcomes, Challenges and New Approaches

Message from the Guest Editors

The present Special Issue aims to collect high-quality submissions from the research field of forensic sciences. We encourage researchers from various fields within the journal's scope to contribute papers highlighting the latest developments in their work or to invite relevant experts and colleagues to do so. The focus of this Special Issue includes, but is not limited to: forensic medicine; forensic psychiatry; forensic anthropology; forensic pathology; forensic ballistics; forensic biomechanics; forensic chemistry; and forensic genetics. With this Special Issue, we hope to stimulate further interest in this area, provide new research perspectives and draw attention to the challenges and innovative approaches in the field of forensics, including all its subfields. This Special Issue will provide a valuable resource for forensic sciences and aims to establish a network for professionals from different forensic areas through which to exchange their latest practices and research in the field. All professionals are invited to submit their theoretical and/or applied research.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
