Underwater Image

Message from the Guest Editor

The study of living organisms at the bottom of the sea or rivers using optical imaging, measuring undersea pollution, studying weather phenomena related to the sea, lakes, or rivers, monitoring fish farms and constructions like dams and bridges, as well as activities such as laying underwater cables, monitoring undersea geological structures, employing high-tech imaging solutions for the discovery and classification of archaeological relics, monitoring the undersea environment for defense purposes, using cameras to support diving and rowing sports, and so on, are some indicative applications of underwater imaging. Authors working in any of these areas are encouraged to submit the results of their research in the Special Issue of "Underwater Image". In this Special Issue we welcome both original research papers and review articles on diverse topics such as:

- image processing
- underwater cameras
- underwater communications
- undersea pattern recognition
- underwater activities

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
