Recent Advances in Nutraceutical and Cosmeceutical Sciences for Health Products

Message from the Guest Editor

The health sciences incorporate everything related to functional foods, drugs, supplements, nutraceuticals, cosmeceuticals and products for personal well-being. New market trends demonstrate that the attention paid to natural substances contained in foods, vegetables, and by-products of the agri-food industry as a source of bioactive molecules has grown, alongside the awareness of the relationship between these molecules and health. The aim of this Special Issue is to explore recent developments in innovative materials and engineering processes related to food, cosmetic, and drug sciences. Our focus is on medical devices, functional foods, and natural remedies for traditional and innovative clinical uses. The international scientific community is invited to contribute to the understanding of changes in the mentioned sectors by submitting research that highlights recent advances in nutraceutical and cosmeceutical science in relation to health products.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
