From Neuron to Neuropathology: Innovation in Conceptual Frameworks, Diagnosis, Interventions and Treatment

Message from the Guest Editors

Brain injury and neuropathological conditions are a global public health problem, adversely affecting the quality of life, employment status and life expectancy of those affected, and placing a strain on healthcare provision and neurorehabilitation services. It is now time for a step-change in approaches to diagnosing and treating neuropathological conditions, including the introduction of new theoretical frameworks, and innovative methods for diagnosing and treating these conditions. Further, linking these advances with clinical service models and delivery in practice is an area in need of urgent attention and dissemination within the literature. Accordingly, this Special Issue calls for papers focused on new and innovative approaches to the treatment and management of neuropathological conditions.
