Special Issue

The Intersection of COVID-19 and Mental Health among Vulnerable Populations

Message from the Guest Editors

We welcome Original Articles and Review Articles based on comprehensive literature reviews from different academic disciplines that engage issues of mental health, wellbeing, quality of life, resilience, hope, and fear of threats, such as psychology, psychiatry, cognitive and behavioral sciences, public health, sociology, anthropology and philosophy based on theoretical analysis or empirical studies with different methodological approaches. We also invite presentations that discuss the wide variety of ethical and human rights issues that arise from the challenges of COVID-19.
