Rapid Reviews for Behavioral Health

Message from the Guest Editors

The present Special Issue aims to showcase health-related evidence syntheses that are completed in a timely and resource-efficient manner. We, therefore, look forward to receiving rapid reviews in any area of behavioral health. Behavioral health emphasizes individual responsibility in the maintenance of health and the prevention of disease by means of self-initiated health behaviors, such as exercising, sleeping well, eating healthily, using condoms, abstaining from substance abuse, adopting a healthy mindset, etc. Rapid reviews are evidence syntheses that expedite the process of traditional systematic reviews by streamlining or omitting various methods to produce a body of knowledge in a shortened timeframe. To be considered for publication in this Special Issue, rapid reviews must adhere to the core principles of systematic reviews to avoid bias in the inclusion, assessment and synthesis of evidence.
