

Special Issue

Autobiographical Memory and Cognition in Aging

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to invite you to contribute to this Special Issue, focused on autobiographical memory and its role as a reconstruction of past experiences.

Autobiographical memory is not simply the recollection of past events, but it is deeply connected to the emotional context in which these events are encoded, stored, and later retrieved. This Special Issue thus aims to explore the dynamic processes that underlie autobiographical memory, including its interplay with emotional regulation, the various functions that it serves, episodic memory, cultural frameworks such as life scripts, and the neural mechanisms which support these processes. We invite researchers from psychology, neuroscience, cognitive science, social sciences, and related fields to submit original empirical studies, theoretical papers, or comprehensive reviews on these themes. Join us in this exciting exploration of autobiographical memory and contribute to advancing this vital area of research. We look forward to your submissions and fostering a deeper understanding of the processes and functions that shape our personal pasts.
