Young Researchers in Neuroscience

Message from the Guest Editor

In this Special Issue, we aim to feature early-career researchers in neuroscience. The senior author(s) of each contribution should be (a) the first or last author and the corresponding author, and (b) have completed their Ph.D in the last 10 years (or equivalent), be an assistant professor, or be on track to receive tenure. We welcome submissions from a range of research fields. Articles submitted to this Special Issue should meet all standard requirements of individual biology articles (regarding quality, novelty, and significance) and be relevant to a broad international and interdisciplinary readership. Authors contributing to this Special Issue will have the opportunity to be nominated for next year's Young Investigator Award.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

A major strength of biological science is the diversity of approaches that biological scientists apply to their research problems. Biology reflects this diversity and brings together studies employing the varied experimental and theoretical approaches that are fueling biological discovery. Biology, the journal, is a fully peer-reviewed publication with a rapid and economical route to open access publication and is listed on PubMed. All articles are peer-reviewed and the editorial focus is on determining that the work is scientifically sound rather than trying to predict its future impact.
