

Special Issue

Advances in Fish Immunology and Vaccination during the Past and in Recent Years

Message from the Guest Editors

Fish are the oldest animal group with an immune system showing clear similarities with the defence systems of mammals and birds. Both innate and acquired immune responses have been described during the 19th and 20th century. This special issue can be regarded as an update for the successful special issue "Current Topics in Fish Immunology" published in Volume 4 of this journal in 2015 and will provide us with an overview of the developments in fish immunology and vaccination during the past and in recent years.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

A major strength of biological science is the diversity of approaches that biological scientists apply to their research problems. Biology reflects this diversity and brings together studies employing the varied experimental and theoretical approaches that are fueling biological discovery. Biology, the journal, is a fully peer-reviewed publication with a rapid and economical route to open access publication and is listed on PubMed. All articles are peer-reviewed and the editorial focus is on determining that the work is scientifically sound rather than trying to predict its future impact.
