Imaging Technology for Human Diseases

Message from the Guest Editor

The Special Issue "Imaging Technology for Human Diseases" focuses on the growing importance of technological advances in diagnostics. We know how diagnostic accuracy surely comes from precise diagnosis that only experience combined with state-of-the-art equipment can give us. The purpose of this Special Issue is to bring together the experience of various hospital and/or university centers in the field of imaging, from X-ray to mammography, CT, MRI or ultrasound, to angiography, where the aid of new technologies can facilitate diagnosis and treatment in the field of human pathology.
